Within the historic walls of the fortification the Oberhausmuseum presents exciting exhibitions which open a window into life in a castle during the Middle Ages and shine a light on Passau's colourful history and its importance as a centre of trade over the centuries. From the castle's view point "Battery Linde" you can enjoy the unique panorama of Passau's picturesque old town and the confluence of the city's three rivers, the Danube, the Inn and the Ilz. Another highlight of this impressive European cultural monument is the chapel of St. George at the heart of the castle with its magnificent gothic frescos. In the newly reopened Observation Tower, multimedia installations offer glimpses of distant eras, while a climb to the upper platform is rewarded by unrivalled panoramic views.

The Veste Oberhaus app gives you the opportunity to explore the castle grounds on various tours and conjures up long-vanished people and events.

The Roman museum of the fort Boiotro occupies a late medieval house in the central Passau-Innstadt. It incorporates the foundations of late Roman Boiotro, a fortification built by the Romans around AD 280. The name of the fortress is known from the literary description of the life of the Roman diplomat Severinus, who established a small monastery within its ruins in the late 5th century.

Surviving sections of the fortification walls and watchtowers are visible in the open space and integrated into the museum. The museum exhibits 600 objects. Together with references to ancient sources, explanatory texts and numerous models these vividly illustrate the 400 years history of Roman rule in this town on the northern frontier of the Empire. Digital media including touchscreens, a light installation and a virtual reconstruction of the military and civilian sites at Passau bring its complex Roman history to life.

This direct connection between the visible original walls of the fortress, the objects found on the site of the museum, and a related historical narrative, enables visitors to the Roman museum of the fort of Boiotro to physically bridge the passage of time and see, feel and understand the city's Roman past.

The Town Hall of Passau consists of one large Council Chamber (Großer Rathausaal) and one smaller Council Chamber (Kleiner Rathausaal). They are located in the Old Town Hall and are accessible via a Gothic staircase dating from 1446. Following the devastating Great Fires of 1662 and 1680, this hall was reconstructed with two naves and three flat casebays by the Italian master builders Carlo Lurago and Giovanni Battista Carlone. The Passau artist Ferdinand Wagner worked on the decoration of the hall between 1887 and 1890; his paintings show various historical scenes. The two large oil paintings, "The Wedding of Emperor Leopold" (Hochzeit Kaiser Leopolds) and "The Entry of Kriemhild" (Einzug der Kriemhild), were completed in May 1892 and July 1893, respectively.

The smaller hall is used for plenary sessions of the Passau Council and also for civil wedding ceremonies at the Register Office. Occupying about 100 square metres and connected to the larger hall on the south-facing side, its structure is somewhat simpler, forming an almost perfect square with a four-window axis. An arbor-like structure supported by four Tuscan pillars connects it to the main Chamber. Following the Great Fire of 1662, Lurago und Carlone rebuilt this hall in the Baroque style. It was in all likelihood painted completely in white at the time. The decorative elements we see today were painted by Ferdinand Wagner in the 19th century.

The Museum at the Passau Cathedral is situated in the Residence building and displays masterpieces of art ranging from the Romanesque period up to the present. The so-called major court hall was the site of the festivities celebrating the wedding of Emperor Leopold I of Austria to Eleonora, daughter of the Palatine Count and Duke of Palatine-Neuburg in 1676. Today the room is used for special exhibitions, focusing on contemporary art.

In 1694 Johann Carlone created frescoes for the former Prince-Bishop's library. After extensive restauration between 1984 and 1986, they can now be seen in their original splendor. They show an illusionist architecture with personifications of various arts and sciences. The spacious room combines its historical furnishings with the Baroque collection of books, and valuable objects from the Cathedral treasury. The overall effect provides visitors with a rich experience.

The exquisite Rococo stucco work above the magnificent staircase in the New Residence, was executed in 1768 by Johann Baptist Modler. The ceiling painting by Johann Georg Unruhe, a student of Paul Troger, shows us the Olympian heaven with its gods and goddesses, who tirelessly watch over the well being of the inhabitants of Passau.

No other dog seems to be as world-famous as the dachshund. The 100th anniversary of the Free State of Bavaria, the dachshund in nobility or the dachshund in hunting as well as "Waldi", the dachshund of the 1972 Olympic Games, are focal points in the museum.

The museum is located in Residence Square, which is no doubt the most beautiful square in the city of Passau. The collection was compiled by the two master florists Seppi Küblbeck and Oliver Storz over the last 25 years and is now shown to the public for the first time. A large number of exhibits are lovingly presented in showcases, with a wink of an eye and a great passion for the dachshund, which represents Bavaria like nobody else.

A screen presentation both in German and English explains the extensive murals in the museum. The delicate secco paintings themselves can be seen behind glass.

The more than 800-year-old wall paintings belong to the most valuable cultural assets of Romanesque art in southern Germany.

At the end of the 20th century various studios and decorative arts workshops moved into rooms on the ground floor in historic Höllgasse. Inspired by this, AGON Passau e.V. was founded in 2000 together with other artists of Passau. The translation of the Ancient Greek word AGON means competition. It emphasizes that the artists meet the challenge of a creative contest.

Their cultural heart is mainly the Höllgasse. This fact is supported by the slogan "Cultural impulse from Höllgasse" which is connected to the association's name.

Every year AGON artists dedicate their artistic year to a new topic which they transfer to their pavement paintings and air installations in Höllgasse or to a single or joint exhibition in the WPG vault.

The vitas of over 40 artists show different artistic educations, professions and paths of life. Their scopes are painting, graphic arts, photography, ceramic arts, sculptures, installation, jewelry, fashion, puppet theater and costumed guided tours.

It's been 30 years since the Producers' Group of Artists united and became one of the most important institutions within Passau's art world. In the first years from 1990 the gallery was in the Höllgasse marking the beginning of the "Passau art mile". Two years later, in 1992, the group moved to the location in Bräugasse/Jesuitengasse, which is still the gallery's home today. This change of location to the immediate neighborhood of the Passau Museum of Modern Art and the "Kulturmodell Bräugasse" proved to be extremely beneficial.

The artists' union maintains lively international exchange with other artists and institutions. Currently the group consists of 8 active producing members: Waltraud Danzig, Hubert Huber, Wolfgang Kretzer, Anja Kutzki, Stefan Meisl, Otto Müller, Verena Schönhofer and Ernst Zahnweh. Using their fast growing network the Producers' Gallery has realized over 300 exhibitions and more than 50 external projects.

Since 1992 the gallery's work has been supported by an association of sponsors. Their generosity enables the groups' numerous and varied activities.
